About GLHV

GLHV is a lesbian, gay, bisexual, trans and gender diverse, and intersex (LGBTI) health and wellbeing policy and resource unit. GLHV is funded by the Victorian Government and sits within the Australian Research Centre in Sex, Health and Society (ARCSHS), La Trobe University.

GLHV's mission is to improve the health and wellbeing of LGBTI Victorians and the quality of care they receive. GLHV runs training and provides information and resources across the health, education and community and aged care sectors, including the HOW2 and Rainbow Tick Programs. GLHV undertakes LGBTI research and policy in collaboration with ARCSHS, other academic institutions, LGBTI community organisations and Government. GLHV also maintains a comprehensive, on-line LGBTI health research and information clearing house (www.glhv.org.au).

About the LGBTI-inclusive practice audit tool

This audit tool can be used by organisations to get a sense of how LGBTI-inclusive they are. The audit tool is built around the six Rainbow Tick Standards. Each of the Standards is accompanied by its own set of quality-based indicators that organisations can use to gauge how well their current systems, practices and protocols are meeting the intent of that particular Standard.

The six LGBTI-inclusive practice Standards are:

- Organisational capability
- Workforce development
- Consumer participation
- A welcoming and accessible organisation
- Disclosure and documentation
- Culturally safe and acceptable services.

The audit tool poses a question for each of the indicators that make up the six Rainbow Tick Standards. You and your audit team are asked to rate how well you believe your organisation is doing by using the following scale to answer each of the questions:

Not met – Little or no progress has been made

Part met – Some progress has been made

Met – Good progress has been made

As you answer each question, identify and record the evidence that substantiates the rating you have given. In the case of 'not met' or 'part met', identify and list possible areas of improvement to achieve a 'met' rating.

Developing an LGBTI-inclusive action plan

The audit tool can be used by an organisation to identify achievements and to determine where improvements are required. The results of the audit can inform forward planning including change management, systems redesign/improvement and cultural reform.

The results of the audit can also be used to assist in the development of an LGBTI-quality improvement and change management plan that prioritises action areas and identifies the resources that will be required. GLHV has recently released The Rainbow Tick guide to LGBTI-inclusive practice (2016) which assists organisations to develop a comprehensive change management plan and is an ideal resource for organisations that are considering going for Rainbow Tick accreditation (www.glhv.org.au/lgbti-inclusive-practice).

Tips for getting the most out of your audit

1. Assemble the team of people who can best answer the audit questions. This may mean assembling a different group of people for different Standards. Consider gaining a range of different perspectives and involve different stakeholders in the audit, including consumers. Appendix 1 provides a check list of the audit team and who was involved in auditing each of the six Standards.
2. In order for change to occur across the whole organisation and to be sustained it has to be embedded in organisational systems. Consider the following:
  - Does your organisation have adequate guiding documentation to ensure people know how things should work – ‘Who does what, when and how’?
  - Do staff and volunteers know what is expected of them?
  - Do consumers know what they can expect?
  - Are staff and volunteers’ practices in line with guiding documentation?
  - How is this monitored?
  - How do you know the organisation achieves its objectives?
  - Who is responsible for making sure all this happens?
  - Are systems capable of dealing with complexity?
  - Are systems agile enough to cope with change, both from within and outside the organisation?
3. Think about the evidence, which may be written, observed or verbally reported. Written evidence can be:
  - Guiding documentation E.g. legislation, external funding/program/clinical guidelines, policies and procedures and associated forms and templates
  - Records of the way a system is implemented E.g. databases, case records, or minutes of meetings
  - Records of the way a system is monitored and evaluated E.g. audit results and reports, service review reports, reporting to the executive and governing body.
